Newsletter Josh Baldwin: Four keys in deciding whether to sign Cade Sparks By: Josh Baldwin Brett McMurphy The truth is, there's not really a good reason to sign Cade Sparks, the Graham Cracker offensive lineman at West Georgia. As much credit as Sparks has as an exceptional athlete, it's hard to look beyond the fact that he's a load, at least by NFL standards. The 6-foot-6, 277-pound Sparks, a redshirt sophomore, is a near-three-sack a game sort of guy who's played in the Under Armour Senior Bowl and NFL Scouting Combine in the last year. So the scouts have been keeping tabs on him, but he's not exactly a guy that would send anybody home. With that in mind, here's a quick list of four keys to whether the Tigers should sign Sparks:

1. Get back in the hunt for the services of 5-star true freshman defensive end target Dustin Hills. Hills, who is considering Auburn, Georgia and Clemson, would obviously be a huge win for Auburn should it be able to sign him this week.

The Community Bully, an assessment instrument for identifying school children who are a potential threat to their classmates, was administered to a community sample of 1529 children from 14-16 years of age in grades 3-5. High internal consistency ( $\alpha = .75$ ) was found for the Community Bully and evidence of discriminant validity was demonstrated by lower mean Community Bully scores for African American and Hispanic students than for White students. Students in the upper quartiles of the Community Bully had more school problems than students in the lower quartiles and were more often engaged in bullying behavior in school and out of school than those in the lower quartile. Implications of these findings for teachers and for future research on the relationship between problematic social behavior and aggression are discussed.In her first policy proposal as campaign manager for Hillary Clinton's 2016 presidential campaign, Kellyanne Conway suggests President Obama send former CIA head John Brennan a "passport and cash" for helping to train ISIS terrorists. And the reason she would do this is because Obama used to be a spy himself. "Because the founding fathers would not want ISIS training manuals floating around out there," Conway writes in her new book, "What Happened," on the terrorist training manual published by the Islamic State. But why not just email it? "John Brennan is one of the people who helped put the ISIS manual together," Conway explains. "How about we give the former director of the CIA a passport and cash, and we can always barf on it if it's not delivered." But what if the phone lines are down, and they can't get the passport to you? "Oh, then they should go ahead and leave it with one of the ISIS-trained terrorists," she continues. "It's the least the president can do for those brave men and women who sacrificed everything for our country." For the record
